

SANDIA SCIENCE & TECHNOLOGY PARK

July 2011

“The signing of this License Agreement will ensure that the Sandia Science & Technology Park will continue to have state-of-the-art telecommunications service. I am proud to have been involved in the development of this important effort during my previous term at the State Land Office, and I am pleased to continue to build on this partnership with Sandia National Laboratories, the Sandia Science & Technology Park Development Corporation, City of Albuquerque, Build New Mexico, and the Albuquerque Public Schools.”

Tenant News

Ktech – On June 14, Raytheon Company acquired key business assets of Ktech Corporation, a long-standing tenant of Sandia Science & Technology Park. The new Raytheon Ktech, becomes part of Raytheon’s Missile Systems business, and the expertise in directed energy and pulsed power makes it a natural fit with Raytheon’s combat-proven platforms. Raytheon’s interest in expanding in Albuquerque could lead to an expansion of Raytheon Ktech Facilities, within the Sandia Science & Technology Park, creating more high-paying jobs within the Park.

Poly-Flow – Air Products and Chemicals Inc acquired the assets and operations of Poly-Flow Engineering LLC on June 14. By acquiring Poly-Flow’s line of equipment focused on advanced chemical delivery and precision cleaning, the company hopes to broaden its products and services for customers in the semiconductor industry. The combination of the talented and experienced Poly-Flow team and Air Products’ global capabilities and services infrastructure will bring long-term benefits to their customers.

EMCORE – The company’s new Memorial Garden is a tribute to the ones who lost their lives and were hurt in last July’s tragedy. It also commemorates employees’ spirit, resilience and dedication to one another. EMCORE thanks their employees and neighboring businesses at the Sandia Science & Technology Park for the courageous efforts that so many made in helping others during that tragic day. Everyone’s generous support has played a crucial role in the process of healing and recovery.
